

I was born into a Christian home and grew up attending Sunday school and church. My family's first church was People's Baptist Church in Kelowna, British Columbia. When I was about five or six years old, after a church service one evening, I remember lying in bed thinking about heaven and hell. I realized that if I were to die, I would be separated from Christ. That night, I went to my parents and told them I wanted to be saved. I accepted what Jesus did on the cross for me, and He became my Savior.

Not long after, when I was six or seven, my family moved to Lethbridge, Alberta. As a child, I had a boldness to share my faith, even going to the park and telling complete strangers about what Jesus had done for them. I couldn't keep it to myself—I had to let others know about my Savior.

As I grew older, especially during my teenage years, I went through a season of struggling with my faith. I had many doubts and questions, and I often wondered if I was truly saved. I even carried a deep fear of being left behind at the Rapture. For years, I pushed those fears aside, but the uncertainty weighed heavily on me. One night, I overheard my mom talking with my younger sister, who was also doubting her salvation. Something my mom said spoke directly to my heart, and I realized that I had been saved back when I first asked Jesus into my heart as a child. Since then, I have not doubted my salvation, but have fully rested in Jesus Christ as my eternal security.

After surrendering my life to the Lord, He directed me to Faithway Baptist College of Canada, where I completed a four-year Bachelor of Theology degree with a minor in Church Missions Work. In the past year, I have also gotten engaged to a, Olivia Tudhope. She is currently finishing her final year of study to become a Christian school teacher, and we plan to be married in May 2026.

For the last four months, I have been interning at Golden Harvest Baptist Church. My responsibilities have included a wide range of tasks such as planting and caring for trees on the property, running errands for the church, learning from Pastor Ryan, helping to lead services through worship, song-leading, and special music, assisting with youth activities, participating in young adult activities, and even preaching in Wednesday night Bible studies and a Sunday morning service.

My current calling is to assist in the ministry—a calling that Olivia shares as well. Together, we desire to be a help and a vessel fit for God's use in His work. I also desire to continue growing in spiritual maturity and gaining practical ministry experience. Thank you for your prayers and encouragement as we follow the Lord's leading.
